

GLUTEN FREE FOODS ON PRESCRIPTION – GUIDANCE FOR GPs

The Coeliac UK 2004 guidelines, which recommend the amount of gluten free foods that a person with coeliac disease or dermatitis herpetiformis should be able to access on prescription, are shown below. The recommendations are given as units per month and are based on nutritional requirements, age, gender, how active the person is and whether they are pregnant or breastfeeding. These amounts should only be exceeded on the advice of the dietitians.

In January 2011 Coeliac UK issued a statement recommending that cake mixes should no longer be available on prescription and sweet biscuits should only be considered in exceptional circumstances on clinical advice. Staple foods such as breads (including fresh bread), pasta, flours, crispbreads, breakfast cereals and pizza bases listed by the ACBS should remain available.

When someone is diagnosed with coeliac disease they should always be seen by a dietitian who will advise about dietary management of the condition, and also provide vouchers for people to sample products from different manufacturers in order to find out what they like before requesting prescriptions.
